

Abstract

We will review a few problems that can be formulated as quadratic optimization models, as well as some techniques to solve them optimally (various degrees of RLT), make them easier to solve by BB (convexification using SDP), or solve them approximately (convex hull relaxation). We will present computational results and discuss areas of possible future improvement.